About the Book RUDOLF VIRCHOW Rudolf Virchow, the son of a small farmer and shopkeeper, was born at Schivelbein, in Pomerania, on October 13, 1821. He graduated in medicine at Berlin, and was appointed lecturer at the University, but his political enthusiasm brought him into disfavour. In 1849 he was removed to Wurzburg, where he was made professor of pathology, but in 1856 he returned to Berlin as Professor and Director of the Pathological Institute, and there acquired world-wide fame. His celebrated work, Cellular Pathology as based on Histology, published in 1856, marks a distinct epoch in the science. Virchow established what Lord Lister describes as the true and fertile doctrine that every morbid structure consists of cells which have been derived from pre-existing cells...
