Restorative Processes and Zero Tolerance Policies: Can they co-exist?

By Avery Hulbert

LAP Lambert Acad. Publ. Nov 2010, 2010. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 220x150x7 mm. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - School violence is an issue currently generating much policy and research attention. It has become a serious concern, not only because of its damaging effects but also because it is linked to later anti-social and criminal behaviour. Typically, responses to school violence fall into three categories: anti-bullying initiatives; zero tolerance policies; and restorative practices. This study explores the feasibility of restorative practices in Canadian schools that have zero tolerance policies towards violence. Hirschi's social bonding theory (1969) is used to support arguments for the need to shift from current punishment orientated responses to more restorative responses. Through an inductive case study analysis of an Ontario secondary school it is concluded that through changing school culture, engaging everyone at the school level, and designing a needs based response that restorative processes can exist within a school governed by a zero tolerance policy. 120 pp. Englisch.

Reviews

The book is great and fantastic. Better then never, though i am quite late in start reading this one. I realized this publication from my dad and i advised this ebook to find out.
