Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Speeches on Illinois and Michigan Canal: And Other Subjects In the northeastern corner of the State, on the southwestern bend of Lake Michigan, at that date was located Fort Dearborn, a small frontier post, guarded by a company of United States soldiers. Sir, outside the fort were the cabins of a half dozen white men (intermarried with squaws), who eked out a scanty subsistence by doing odd jobs for the people in the fort, and by trading with the Indians who came at stated periods to receive blankets, the gift of the Great Father at Washington, and to trade furs with the resident agents of the American Fur Company for the red man s treasures - whisky and powder. The fort and these cabins covered nearly all the dry land which lay within several miles. To the east was the great lake, three hundred miles long, sixty miles wide, and nine hundred feet deep. Its fountain waters were plowed once or twice a year only, by a small schooner, which supplied the fort and the...
