Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Nashville Journal of Medicine and Surgery, Vol. 69: January-June, 1891 After the defervescence, the urine again becomes but little toxic, descending suddenly or gradually to the normal. Physiological analysis reveals the toxicity of the urine, at the time of the crisis, to depend upon different poisons, little known from a chemical point of view. Schutz, under orders from the Prussian government, has been experimenting on cattle, by inoculating them with warm lymph from the lungs of cattle suffering from inflammation of the lungs. He found such inoculation afforded immunity from the infectious inflammation. Netter relates the case of a woman who gave birth to a child when she was very ill with acute pneumonia. The child lived five days, and at the post-mortem examination, pneumonia at the apex of the right lung was found with double pleurisy, suppurative pericarditis and cerebro-spinal meningitis. A microscopic examination showed pneumococci. The rarity of pneumonia at this age, supports the conclusion that in this case it was due to infection from the mother. A similar infection of the fetus has been found in rabbits, guinea pigs and mice. The pneumococci sometimes seem to produce pneumonia in the mother and pericarditis in the child, or suppurative meningitis in the mother and pneumonia in the child. Netter has only found three cases of this pneumonic infection in woman. Spleno-pneumonia is reported by Dauchez, Deville, and Cheron. The cases were characterized by the following symptoms: Flatness, considerable diminution of vesicular murmur, soft blowing, broncho-egophony. To these may be added: Fine crepitations limited to inspirations, preservation of Traube space and the progressive increase of vesicular murmur from base to summit as recovery...
